MR. CHURCH ON THE RACK

THE CHIEF ENGINEER RECITING HIS CHAPTER ON THE AQUEDUCT.

He Was Not Consulted in Regard to the Award of Contracts-One Order that Seems to Have Been Misinterpreted and Another Which O'Brien & Clark Heard of Very Early After Its Issuance.

The atmosphere in the vicinity of the Aqueduct Investigating Committee was permeated this morning with rumors of sensational developments and of possible summary removals of Aqueduct Commissioners by Gov. Hill.

Senator Van Cott did not believe there was any truth in them, and Senator McNaughton said very decidedly, on the authority of an intimate friend of the Governor, that the latter would take no action in the matter at all until the report of the committee had been submitted. It was also stated that the questions relating to the Aqueduct Commission would not come before the extra session of the Legis-

Senator Hendricks presided and Senator Fassett was absent. Chief Engineer Benjamin S. Church, who was the first witness of the day, had with him a large staff of assistants, who brought great armfuls of books and documents.

In answer to Mr. Boardman's question Mr. Church stated that he had been chief engineer of the Aqueduct since the beginning of

Neither he nor any one of the engineering department had been consulted in regard to the award of contracts, except so far as to give an opinion as to the manner in which they should be awarded generally.

"I advised and always hoped that the Commissioners would award the contract so that the contractors could concentrate their plant. This was for convenience in prosecuting the work." "You recollect the circular letter of Nov. 20, 1886, in regard to the substitution of rubble masonry for dry packing?"
"Yea, sir."
"Before this letter it was the custom generally to use dry packing over the arch, was it not?"
"Yes, sir."

"Yes, sir."

The chief engineer here made a statement showing the various kinds of construction used in the Aqueduct and the length of each in miles, by which it appeared that there were six miles of timbered section and four miles of sunken aqueduct which required rubble masonry over the arch.

There were some places where rubble was put in instead of dry filling when there was no timber. Counter foot arches were put in in some places at the suggestion of put in in some places at the suggestion of Mr. Barnes. The order of Nov. 20 was made to prevent the danger of poor work on the part of con-tractors, who had an opportunity of shirking their work by not putting in filling at all, or by using poor material, and it only had refer-ence to the mode of putting in rubble

Mr. Church said that a previous order of Sept. 23, 1886, was the important one in re-lation to rubble masonry. in which he left it to the judgment of the principal assistant engineer where he should use rubble in the place of dry filling.

He admitted that the divisional engineers misinterpreted his letter of Nov. 20, and construed it as a general order of substi-tution.

The witness did not know that O'Brien & Clark found out about this order first and began to take advantage of it. He remembered, however, that Contractor McBean, of Brown, Howard & Co., had complained that his firm was not getting the advantage that their rivals were, and wanted the same privileges.

their rivals were, and wanted the same privileges.

"Don't you think it strange that it should have taken the Chief Engineer five months to find out that this mistake was being made?" inquired Mr. Boardman.

"Yos. but it is more strange that my subordinates did not report it to me."

Messrs. O'Brien & Clark, continued the witness, both came before him and urged him to change his April order, und unless this was done they would be greatly damaged pecuniarily. They did not make any threats, however, and he had not changed his policy since that day in consequence of anything that they had said to him.

"Well, why was not that the end of the matter?"

"Well, why was not that the end of the matter?"

"Because the contractors brought the matter before the Committee on Construction and I was asked by the committee to give information.

"The feeling in the Commission." said Mr. Church, "was that it was better to lean on the side of safety, and I was asked to reconsider my order of April 29."

Mr. Church stated that the expense of rubble masonry in good ground was insignificant. He also declared he never would have changed bis April policy had it not been directed by Mee. Frs. Barnes and Ridgway.

The resolution of the Committee on Construction, passed July 11, 1887, and already in evidence, finally settled the rubble question by returning to the old policy, as the division engineers understood it, under the order of Nov. 20, 1886, and, in fact, substituted rubble for dry filling throughout the entire length.

entire length

Mr. Church said he was very much surprised at the resolution, because it practically overruled his decision of April on a purely engineering question.

After the order of April, 1887, the Commissioners went over the Aqueduct and examined it, but Mr. Church did not think that they learned enough in that trip to war-rant them in overruling his decision in the

The Contractor Forgiven for His Default as to Boodler Keenan's Complaint.

Boodler Keenan's effort to get from Contractor Heman Clark his alleged share in certain Aqueduct contracts was revived today by a motion in Supreme Court Chambers, by John O'Brien, of the firm of O'Brien & Clark, Aqueduct contractors, to have his default reopened.

The complaint was served on him June 19, and the suit is similar to that pending in the Court of Common Pleas against Clark.
Chauncey S. Truax on behalf of O'Brien said that E. T. Lovatt, the attorney of O'Brien, had been so engrossed with the work of the Senate Committee that he had let the time slie.

work of the Senate Committee that he had let the time slip by.

A young man from Col. Bliss's office opposed the opening of the default. The suit, he said, was for an accounting of the proceeds of the Aqueduct contracts, and a receiver was desired to take charge of them pending the suit.

Judge Ingraham said he would grant the costs of motion, but that instead of extending the time to answer only two or three ing the time to answer only two or three days, as would have been done by consent, he would grant an extension of twenty days from to day for O'Brien to serve his answer.

One Was Knecked Out. ISPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. I

LOWELL, Mass., July 13.-Wallace Powers and Charles Harrington, clerks in a fashionable drug store on Merrimac street, fought a duel with bare fists on the outskirts of the city last night.

The cause of the trouble was that a pretty weaver in the Hamilton Mills had been keeping company and receiving presents from each without the knowledge of the other until recently.

They sgreed to settle the question in a ring battle.

Harrington had the best of the encounter in the first round, but Powers got wild and, making a spring at his opponent, left him in an insensible condition by a blow over the Boulanger and Floquet Fight.

Serious Wounds Inflicted on the General.

Slight Injuries to the Prime Minister.

Boulanger Received a Wicked Thrust in the Neck.

Serious Outcome of the Scene in the Deputies.

The Battle Fought at Neuillysur-Seine This Morning.

[SPECIAL CABLE DESPATCH TO THE WORLD.]

Paris, July 13. - A duel was fought in the suburbs this morning by Gen. Boulanger and M. Floquet, the Prime Minister. Swords were used, and both men were wounded.

1 2 Jus GEN. BOULANGER.

Gen. Boulanger was seriously wounded, receiving a wicked thrust in the neck from which a severe hemorrhage resulted.

M. Floquet is but slightly injured. Meagre details of the meeting this morning have been received, but it was known after last night's exciting scene in the Deputies that a fight was imminent.

PREMIER PLOQUET.

MM. Clemenceau and Perrin served as seconds for M. Floquet. A similar service was rendered Boulanger by MM. Le Herisse and Laisant.

The duel was fought at Neuilly-sur-Seine on Count Dillon's estate, not far from Paris. Immediately after the fight both men reurned to their homes.

M. Floquet was received with enthusiasm by his political followers. The affair has caused the greatest sensation in Paris for years. The actual conflict was brief but desperate, and Gen. Boulanger soon fell with an ugly sword gash in his throat, from which the blood flowed in torrents.

M. Floquet did not escape. He was wounded in the hand and received a slight incision in the left breast. Everything was done to stop the hemor-believe the wound is serious. The actual time of fighting is given as four minutes. Boulanger was very much excited, as indeed was Floquet, who was as pale as a Boulanger forced the fighting and made a number of thrusts at the Prime Minister, who handled his sword very awkwardly.

Boulanger received his wound through hi own carelessness. He made a desperate lunge at Floquet in the third encounter.

Floquet's sword, which was kept pointed straight at the General, ended the duel. Boulanger had actually run his neck directly on to the steel and was badly hurt, the blood spurting from the wound in a stream.

He fell into the arms of his seconds, and the physicians, after binding the wound, hurried him back to Paris, where he is being constantly attended. That the General was anzious to kill his opponent there can be no doubt. His fighting was desperate from the first. His thrusts were impetuous and powerful, and it is a matter of surprise that his unskilled enemy should have so successfully resisted these tactics. Both men were determined, and at the end of the second encounter, after Floquet had been wounded in the hand, an effort was nade by the seconds to stop the affair. Neither duellist would assent, and the fight went on, with the result as given above. LATER.—It is thought that Gen. Boulanger's wound is even more serious than at first reported. His friends are much alarmed. The agitation over the event is increasing. Boulanger's friends exceedingly bitter are and charge the politicians with persecution to the verge of assassination.

SKETCHES OF THE DUELISTS. omething of the Lives of Gen. Boulanger and M. Floquet. Charles Thomas Floquet was born at Saint Jean-de-Luz, in the Basses-Pyrenees, Oct. 5, 1828. After concluding his studies he was admitted to the bar of Paris, and soon became noted as an advocate.

He became connected with the editorial management of several newspapers, including Temps and the Siccle, and his advanced ideas brought him into difficulty with the Government. M. Floquet is the lawyer who in 1867, when the late Czar visited Paris law courts in company with the Emperor Napoleon III.,

pany with the Emperor Napoleon III., shouted: "Vive la Pologne," and who subsequently headed a subscription for the purpose of presenting a "revolver of honor" to Herczowski, the young Pole who shot at the Car in the Bois de Boulogne.

He was prominent in the trial of Pierre Bonaparte for the murder of Victor Noir, pleading for the family of the victim.

During the siege of Paris he was assistant to the Mayor of the city. On the 8th of February, 1871, he was elected a Deputy of Paris. He subsequently presided at a political meeting, by which he tried to open the way for an agreement between the Assembly, at Versailles, and the Commune. In 1872 he became a member of the Municipal Council of Paris, and presided over its deliberations. He was again elected a depity in 1875 and was re-elected. In 1882 M. Floquet became Prefect of the Seine, but resigned after a brief occupancy of the office and October of that year was elected to the Chamber of Deputies to represent the town of Perpignan, in the Department of the Pyrences Orientales. He was made President of the Council and Minister of the Interior on April 2, 1888.

His administration was distinguished by many reforms in the army and his avowal of preparation for possible war, which pleased those who entertained the sentiment of revenge against Germany.

The fall of the Goblet Ministry, the retirement of Boul-nger to the command of the Thirteenth Co ps. and his relief from that command for insubordination are all of so recent date that there is no need to mention em in detail.

His attempt to fight a duel with Jules Ferry for alighting remarks concerning him increased his popularity with those who hold a strong anti-German sentiment, and he was soon forced into the Deputies on a popular wave.

Here he demanded a revision of the Constitution, and it was his advocacy of this which resulted in his resignation yesterday.

Fell Into a Neat Trap. Detective Heidelburg, of Police Headquarters, brought to the Tombs Police Court this morning S. J. Richman, a former clerk of J. Schledke, a s. J. Rienman, a former clerk of J. Schlecke, a wholessie clothier at 550 Broadway, whom he charged with stealing nine overcoats.

Richaman left the store a week ago and classpeared. The coats were missed and Richman's arrest was effected by the defective sending him a letter offering him a situation. He fell into the trap and to-day was held for trial. Pawn tickets for the coats were found upon him.

SEARCHING FOR GAMBLERS.

AN "EVENING WORLD" REPORTER LEADS ANOTHER RAID.

Policy Men Are Somewhat Shy Nowadays, So No Arrests Were Made-Stump Locks Up His Shop and Temporarily Disappears-More Warrants Issued and a Big

List of the " Poke Shope" in Preparation. Never in the history of New York has public attention been directed towards policywriters and policy gambling in so large a measure as it has been since THE EVENING World exposed the results of its investigation of this kind of vice. No one unfamiliar with policy would have believed that a gambling game of this sort could get such a hold on New York as it has. THE EVENING WORLD has demonstrated how easy it is to locate these gambling hells. It has put a list of over fifty of them into the hands of Inspector Steers, and is now prepared to swell that list by nearly as many

The game is played more extensively by poor people than people of means, and conconsequently the places infested with the policy shops are mainly in the lower part of town where the bulk of the poorer people live. Of course the policy shops are well known to the people living near them, and by questioning these people the reporters have no difficulty in finding where the shops are. Indeed, one used to their ways can tell

are. I ideed, one used to their ways can tell a policy shop as soon as he sees it.

To evade the law the policy writers now make strangers write their own slips. This dodge was worked on two Evening World reporters Monday by George Stump, an old man who has kept a policy shop in Gouverneur slip for some time and robbed newsboys.

An Evening World reporter was once refused a warrant at Jefferson Market Court because he did not have a slip in the handwriting of the person whom he wished to have arrested. Yesterday the reporter asked for a warrant for the arrest of George Stump, and as an argument for the warrant to issue without the slip, showed the clerks Section 329 of the Penal Code, which says:

A person who opens, sets up or keeps, by him-

A person who opens, sets up or keeps, by himself or another person, an office or other place for registering the numbers of tickets in a lottery within or without this State, or for making, receiving or registering any bets or stakes for the drawing or result of such a lottery, or who advertises or in any way publishes any account of an opening, setting up or keeping of such an office or place, is guilty of a missemeanor.

Notwithstanding that a warrant was out for the proprietor of this place and his den had been raided once, policy has been played there right along.

Owing to a delay yesterday when the police arrived on the scene the proprietor had made good his escape. Two Evenno World reporters were there to identify the man in case he was caught.

A colored man, who gave the name of Charles Jackson, of 218 Wooster street, was just hiding a lottery slip when the officers entered, and the ticket was taken from him by Officer Evans.

George Stump's den was fully described in The Evenno World on Monday, the day he registered the reporters' bets. Stump's shop was found locked. He was away, so the arrest could not be made, but as he is well known his arrest is only a question of a few days.

well known his arrest is only a question of a few days.

Fred Anderson, who managed a policy shop at 132 Leonard street until exposed by That Evening World, has moved a block and a half away, and is now located at the corner of Elm and Tranklin streets.

Sergt, Combes has a warrant for his arrest, too. Anderson kept a cigar store for a bluff at 132 Second street. That is now locked up and the tobacco sign is inside.

The five men who were indicted will be tried as soon as possible.
